Celebrating Battery Lewis and Honoring
Senator Joseph M. Kyrillos, Jr.

We are thrilled to honor New Jersey State Senator Joseph M. Kyrillos, Jr. for his dedication and tireless work on behalf of the citizens of New Jersey. Senator Kyrillos is a resident of Middletown who has made it his life's work to serve his community. We are delighted to celebrate the Monmouth County Park System's Battery Lewis renovations at Historic Hartshorne Woods Park.

Funds raised from this wine and craft beer tasting will contribute to the nearly $100,000 of projects and programs (including the exhibits at Battery Lewis) that the Friends of the Parks commits to in support of the Monmouth County Park System.

We look forward to seeing you on April 27th as we honor Senator Kyrillos and celebrate Battery Lewis!

BATTERY LEWIS, A PIECE OF WWII HISTORY HERE IN MONMOUTH COUNTY.

Battery Lewis was a crucial part of Harbor Defenses of New York during WWII. The Navesink Military Reservation (now Hartshorne Woods Park) was the ideal site due to its high elevation and location at the southern entrance to the New York Harbor. The goal was to deny enemy ships access to New York Bay, to prevent the destruction of harbor facilities and industries by enemy naval guns, and to furnish heavy artillery support for defense against landings. This gun's range could reach just offshore near Point Pleasant Beach to the east end of Long Beach, New York. There were 20 batteries built by the Army, and Battery Lewis was the only battery in the state of New Jersey.
